Questions to ask...

- 1) Does your firm focus solely on family law? The more practice areas, the less focus on family law. Some firms have one, two or three attorneys doing only family law. Some have none. We have eight. And, they all have their own area of focus on which they train and advise their fellow attorneys in the firm.
- 2) How many matters like mine have you handled in the past year or two? An attorney who doesn't regularly handle a family law case like yours may not know critical developments.
- 3) Do you have others in the firm who will also work on my case? Attorneys should assign routine tasks to newer attorneys or paralegals. This saves you money.
- 4) Do you have designated paralegals and client care staff available to answer my questions when they arise? Good attorneys are busy. We have support staff available to assist you when you need us.
- 5) How will I know what's being done on my case? We copy clients on all case activity and regularly provide detailed explanations of specific work done.
- 6) How often have your family law cases been cited by other appellate and trial cases? Our cases have been cited hundreds of times.
- 7) How far up the federal and state court systems have you advocated for their family law clients? Have they advocated for their clients at both the state and federal appellate levels? We have.
- 8) Have you prevailed on family law appeals on the state and federal level? We have.
- 9) Have you ever testified as an expert witness on family law matters for parties represented by other counsel? We have.
- 10) Have you won unanimous family law decisions before both The Supreme Court of Georgia and The United States Supreme Court? (This one is kind of unfair since we're the only firm who has.)
- 11) What is the possibility of a successful outcome? Our attorneys will be frank with you if they don't think the odds are in your favor. We handle hundreds of cases each year and it is important to us to go to court with the facts and the law on our side. This predisposes the Judiciary to trust us.
